U. of M. Receives A $47,410 Grant

ORONO — A grant of $47,410 from the National Science Foundation will support a six-week Summer Institute in Mathematics for Secondary School Teachers at the University of Maine July 8 to August 16, U.M. President Edwin Young announced Monday.

The Institute is being conducted on the Orono campus for the ninth consecutive year and membership is limited to teachers of mathematics in grades nine through 12.

Courses are planned to give teachers an understanding of the basic structure of modern mathematics, to bridge the gap between abstract formulations of arithmetic and algebra and their detailed development, and to indicate how the secondary school curriculum can be modernized. Courses will include The Development of Mathematics; Real Numbers, Algebra, and Number Sets; and Modern Mathematics in the Secondary Schools. Lectures on statistics will also be offered.

Staff members will include U.M. Professors Howard W. Eves and Albert G. Wotton, and Prof. John C. Mairhuber of the University of Richmond, who was recently named head of the U.M. department of mathematics, effective July 1.

Applications for the Institute will be accepted until Feb. 15, and successful applicants will be notified by March 15. Preference will be given to applicants with at least three years teaching experience who have not already participated in a similar institute. The National Science Foundation provides stipend payments of not more than $75 a week for each participant, and a $15 a week allowance for each dependent, to a maximum of four.

Further information may be obtained by writing to the department of mathematics, College of Education Building, Orono.

Health For All

Isolation Is Out

Isolation is deadly for humans. Banishment was the worst the Greeks could conceive. Solitary is still the ultimate punishment. And too often TB patients have suffered painful seclusion. Unnecessarily.

Today, treatment for TB takes place more and more in general hospitals and homes. Patients are seldom surrounded by masked figures in surgical gowns.

There are reasons why. For one thing, much more is known about the TB germ. It is not transmitted by ordinary breathing. Lodged in tiny droplets of moisture, the germ is spread by the explosive force of coughing, sneezing, and laughing. Anti-TB drugs drastically reduce the chances of the TB patient infecting others. In fact, there's evidence that with drug therapy, some patients become non-infectious very shortly — within a few weeks.

TB patients today are treated like human beings. With social needs. But there are still too many patients, and too many thousands of people who are infected and do not know it. Some of these people are probably spreading their infections.

Seeing that TB-infected persons are found and treated will be a major purpose of your tuberculosis and respiratory diseases association in 1968. The association slogan sums the need: "It's a Matter of Life and Breath." If you haven't remembered to send in your Christmas Seal contribution, who not do it today — and start the New Year right.

A University of Maine in Portland faculty member, William P. Steele, instructor in speech, will have his first book, "The Character of Melodrama," published by the University Press this spring. Before going to the Portland campus Steele taught English at York High School, was sports director at WLBZ-TV in Bangor, and worked as a graduate assistant at the U. of M. in Orono.

List Of Signs Of Emotional Illness Given

Dr. Max Hammer, Clinical Psychologist-Director of the Houlton Mental Health Center, has been asked on numerous occasions for a list of signs that parents and others could use for the detection of possible emotional illness in children. Dr. Hammer emphasizes that no one sign alone should be taken as an indication of emotional illness, but if several signs appear, in an intense form, in a child, then the child should be taken to the family physician, and if he feels it is called for, he will refer the child to the proper mental health agency.

Dr. Hammer also emphasizes that early attention to a child's problems can help toward the elimination of those problems more rapidly. Due to the limitation of space, Dr. Hammer lists just some of the signs that frequently appear in emotionally-disturbed children:

1. Incessant daydreaming or extremely withdrawn or overly shy behavior.
2. Extreme destructive behavior towards himself, others or property.
3. Excessive demands for attention and approval.
4. Cannot accept limits or restraints or abide by general rules; discipline of any kind seems to be ineffective.
5. Grossly immature in speech, attitudes, or behavior.
6. Frequent intense temper tantrums at the slightest frustration.
7. Always seems to be fearful, apprehensive or depressed.
8. Constantly expresses the feeling that no one likes him or that everyone is picking on him.
9. Frequently acts as the clown or scapegoat for other children, or excessive jealousy toward and much fighting with other children.
10. Inability or unwillingness to handle even the most minor of responsibilities.
11. Extreme passivity or sissiness in boys and extreme aggressiveness or tomboyishness in girls.
12. Frequent lying or denial of any guilt if caught at something, or overly bragging or boastful.
13. Frequent petty thievery.
14. Excessive statements reflecting feelings of inferiority.
15. Excessive clinging behavior toward parent, or an inability to separate from parent for even a short period of time.
16. Easily discouraged or gives up very easily even when attempting a relatively simple task for a child of his age.
17. Feels easily hurt or rejected; cannot accept constructive criticism — sees all criticism as an attempt to hurt him; excessive crying and/or whining.
18. Very stubborn and does everything contrary to what ever is asked of him.
19. Excessive sexual curiosity and exploration.
20. Lack of motivation or interest in school work or school performance significantly below his intellectual ability.

Chiropractic Care

Coverage Increases

PORTLAND—With the public more health conscious than ever before, over 600 of the nation's private insurance companies are now providing for chiropractic services in their health and accident policies and the trend toward such coverage is showing marked increase, according to a statement issued today by the Maine State Chiropractor's Assoc.

Due to the wide prevalence of back injury in many types of employment, an increasing number of labor-management group insurance contracts are providing for chiropractic care, the statement said.

The association added that a free copy of a booklet titled "Back Injury" is available from members of the Maine State Chiropractor's Assoc. The informative booklet is of particular interest to individuals interested in having provisions for chiropractic care included in insurance policies.

It also contains special information for labor-management officials considering having chiropractic claim provisions included in their group insurance programs.

"With 35 million patients now being served by chiropractic," the Association commented, "it is only natural that many of the keenly interested chiropractic coverage part of their health and accident policies."

The Association added that back injury is one of the most common afflictions among workers in American industry today.

Had a word in mind that wanted to use the word in the dictionary. It was there; it wasn't a word. It should have been a word, sticket, which means as follows: "stuck; not having failed; applied up efficiently to a person who failed in or given up a calling such as a sticket doctor minister." In the sense that I have given up — not failed — no sir — I'll say that I am a sticket lawyer, and a sticket thespian, and a sticket motor cycle rider. But if viewed as a writer, the word should be stinkit.

Houlton Places Second In Eastern Maine Hoop Ratings

The Houlton High basketball team enters into the New Year ranked second in the class LL basketball standings for Eastern Maine. The Shiretowners, undefeated in LL play with a record of 4 wins and no losses, trail the Waterville Panthers and are closely followed by Stearns in the number three position.

Waterville has earned the number one rating on the strength of their recent victories over previously unbeaten Stearns and Winslow.

Whereas there were very few games scheduled during the Christmas vacation, no change in the present standings will be made until the teams get back into action after the first of the year.

Although both Houlton and Old Town were defeated by Orono in the Holiday Basketball Tournament held at Houlton during the holidays, the results of these games are not figured in the team standing for LL competition. Orono is ranked number one in Eastern Maine, Class L standings.

Houlton's next two games will definitely affect the standings. The Shiretowners will have played Stearns at Houlton on January 2 and travel to Old Town on January 5. Both of these games will be re-telvised on WEMT-TV.

Other Aroostook teams to be ranked in the top eight were Madawaska and Fort Fairfield. Madawaska placed number seven while the Fort Tigers trailed in the number eight slot. Caribou was listed as number eleven.

The standings for the top 12 teams in class LL Eastern Maine at the start of year were:

Sophomores in the five colleges on the Orono campus of the University of Maine, and at the University of Maine in Portland, are in the average range or higher when compared with students across the nation on the Scholastic Aptitude, mathematical and verbal sections, and the English Achievement Tests of the College Entrance Examination Board. This was revealed in a study completed of university sophomores by Dr. Robert A. Apostol, director of the University Testing and Counseling Service.

The cash value of Series E and H U. S. Savings Bonds outstanding is now more than $51 billion.

WALKING

Walking is one of those fundamental movements that every beginner learns as he gets acquainted with those funny things on his feet that are called skis.

The most important thing for the beginner to remember in this exercise is that he is on skis, not in street shoes. Even though the maneuver consists of short rhythmic steps, it is not the same as regular walking.

The main difference is that the ski is not lifted off the snow. The ski should slide forward, always with the tip and the tail of the ski on the snow.

Each "step" is accompanied by a forward swing of the pole and the arm opposite the forward-moving leg. For example, as the left ski moves forward, the right arm is extended forward. The pole is placed in the snow near the boot, which puts the skier in a position to slide the opposite ski forward and gives balance on either side.

With each movement, the weight goes from the stationary ski to the advancing ski.

This exercise should be performed on perfectly flat ground with nothing to obstruct the skier.

Next time: "Sidestep or Climbing Steps."

Fish And Game Films To Carry Modest Charges

Public demand for films and publications of the Maine Fish and Game Dept. has grown to the point that it has become necessary to recover some of the production costs.

Film bookings have doubled in recent years, and the consequent maintenance costs have risen sharply. The modest charge is necessary to cover part of the increased costs and keep the films in good condition.

A one-dollar fee on Department films — except those on order — will be charged in order to maintain the film library.

The new price schedule goes into effect January 1, 1968.

Commissioner Ronald T. Speers said, "We would rather not have to charge for these services; handling the funds creates additional work for our staff. But we have reached the limit to which we feel we can support these programs."

"The Department," he pointed out, "does not receive revenue from the general fund. Our revenue comes from the sportsman, through sales of hunting and fishing licenses."

"The public obviously wants these services," he continued, "and we are glad of that. We just need help in covering part of their cost."

Only the booklets and pamphlets with a substantial printing costs will be charged for on a single copy basis. Reprints will continue to be free first-copy but carry a fee for additional copies of the same title.

Aliens Required To Give Address During January

C. C. Doughty, district director of the Maine District of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, stated that the annual alien address report program usually causes a sharp rise in the number of applications for naturalization.

The law requires all aliens in the United States, with few exceptions, to report their addresses each January. Throughout the United States, almost thirty per cent more applications for naturalization are received during the months of January, February and March than are received during other months. Mr. Doughty attributes this sudden rise to the Alien Address Report Program.

Aliens not required to make this report are diplomats and those persons accredited to certain international organizations.

Forms for making the reports will be available to aliens at all Post Offices and offices of the Immigration and Naturalization Service during the month of January. Mr. Doughty indicated that aliens desiring information concerning naturalization or similar matters should obtain the forms at an office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service where personnel trained in these fields will be available to answer inquiries.

which have been made already will be honored without charge. Those received after January 1 must be accompanied by a one dollar fee except in the case of films on safety.

Campgrounds Of The Future May Be Computer Designed

The Maine campground of the future may owe its design to a computer, according to a University of Maine faculty member.

Dr. Joseph Grueter, assistant professor of agricultural business and economics is collecting data on the likes and dislikes of people who use campgrounds, as well as information on costs, returns, and organization. The information will be fed into a computer, and the simulated design model will then be used to answer the questions posed by prospective campground owners.

"More than 50 per cent of the campgrounds in the state of Maine are privately owned, which is the highest percentage in the nation," Dr. Grueter says, but there are very few statistics available here on what makes a campground successful, or the organization to make it a profitable operation.

The computer model is expected to answer these questions for prospective owners.

Dr. Grueter, who joined the U. of M. faculty this fall, divides privately-owned campgrounds into two categories — overnight campgrounds and recreation firms. "It is not a good living to operate overnight campgrounds as a full-time job," Dr. Grueter said.

An overnight campground he describes as one "usually on a major highway where people traveling from one destination to another stay overnight, pay their fee, and go on their way the next day."

As a full-time operation the campground owner must provide more services and activities to keep campers for longer periods of time and opportunities for them to spend their money, Dr. Grueter said.

The recreation firm, or campground, which is emphasized in the study, must provide activities such as water sports or specialized sports such as horseback riding and golf, a recreation hall for rainy days, and a restaurant if the campground is too many miles from a city or town.

While easy access to water is one of the prime requisites listed by people who use campgrounds, Dr. Grueter said imagination on the part of the owner can provide other attractions.

Because the changing trends in campgrounds require not only a greater investment in recreation facilities but also the installation of water, electricity, and sewage, campgrounds are becoming larger.

Dr. Grueter suggested that each owner should have at least 100 sites, but not more than 300. "When the campground is operated as a full-time job, the costs of the owner's investment and the cost of operation increase very fast over 300," he said, "since after that figure many facilities must be doubled."

"In the future," Dr. Grueter added, "people are going to require more quality of environment in their campgrounds as well as the natural beauty which is the first attraction."

On the basis of the data he obtains from questionnaires, personal interviews, and consultations with contractors, supply firms for outdoor recreation equipment, and specialized firms, the relationships between costs and returns for factors such as amount of investment, number of sites, labor use, will be computed using statistical methods.

A typical multiple enterprise recreation firm model will be designed. The design of the model will enable it to answer a number of questions such as, What makes it economically sound to operate a recreation business as a full or part-time occupation? What are the economic consequences of changing the length of the season and what is the break-even point? What types of enterprises should be considered — children's playgrounds, golf courses, others?

Recreation firms will also be simulated, using the computer model, and changes in existing firms and proposed new firms will be simulated. Included in the data which will be generated will be answers to the most efficient use of available land, labor and capital when used for recreation; economic consequences of changing the organization of existing recreation firms; returns to scale of an outdoor recreation firm; and the economics of combining enterprises.

Ricker Meets New Haven Friday Night

The Ricker Bulldogs will be strengthened by the return of Co-captain Dick Soucy when they meet the strong New Haven College team here at 7:30 p. m. on Friday. Soucy has been absent from the Bulldogs lineup as far this year due to a back operation.

Coach Allan Wilson says that Soucy has not recovered fully and will not play the entire game Friday night, but his return will aid the team considerably because of his speed and overall court ability.

The New Haven team defeated Dalhousie University and Ricker at Houlton early in December to win the Potato Classic Basketball Tournament for the third consecutive year. Three New Haven players, John Nisbet, James Katz, and Joseph Fadden, were named on the all-tourney team at the Potato Classic.

Ricker's record for the season is 6-1 overall and 5-0 in Northeast College Conference competition.

Next week Ricker goes to Washington State College for a game on Monday night and is host to University of New Brunswick at 8 p. m. on Wednesday.

The U. of M. Orono campus will be the scene of the annual four-day Northern New England School of Banking September 8 to 12, 1968. This marks the first time the school has been held in Maine. Other schools cooperating with the banking associations of Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine are Dartmouth College and the state land grant universities. Dr. Norris O. Johnson, Maine Bankers Association Professor of Economics at the U. of M. will be the director, and Roland W. MacLeod, vice president of the Merrill Trust Company, Bangor will serve as chairman.

Some 200 Maine high school students and their teachers will be on the Orono campus January 5 for the University of Maine's annual oral interpretation workshop. The theme for the 1968 workshop, sponsored by the speech department, will be interpretation to enrich the cultural offering of the community. Sample programs and materials for group programs for secondary schools and for the community will be featured.

Some State And Local Taxes To Be Deductible

Taxpayers who itemize deductions can claim some state and local taxes on their 1967 Federal income tax returns. District Director of Internal Revenue Whitney L. Wheeler said these include real estate and personal property taxes, state and local income taxes, state and local gasoline taxes, and general sales tax.

Mr. Wheeler said certain state and local taxes and fees are not deductible, for example, liquor and cigarette taxes, auto license fees in most cases, and other items such as water service charges, hunting and fishing licenses, and dog licenses.

Federal taxes are not deductible on individual income tax returns.

Maine taxpayers may use the sales tax table included in the instruction booklet mailed to taxpayers as a guide in computing an average sales tax deduction. However, because the table figures are computed at a 4 per cent rate, an adjustment may be made to reflect the change to a 4 1/2 per cent rate which became effective on November 1, 1967. This can be accomplished by increasing the table figures by 2 per cent. For example, a taxpayer using the booklet figure of $100.00 as a guide for deducting a 4 per cent sales tax may properly deduct $102.00 to reflect the November 1 increase to 4 1/2 per cent and thereby increase his sales tax deduction.

RC&D Soil Maps Can Help Locate Sugar Beet Stations

Charles S. Knight, chairman of the St. John-Aroostook Resource Conservation and Development Steering Committee, announces the availability of soil suitability information for towns interested in constructing one of Maine Sugar Industries' proposed sugar beet storage and loading stations.

Mr. Knight said, "This is the type of thing the RC&D Project has been concerned with in every town. It means finding the most suitable soil available for industrial construction." Mr. Knight said further, "The soil survey, made by the Soil Conservation Service, is colored, showing the suitability of the soil for any specific purpose and, thus, gives the town or city planning board a picture of the areas best suited for the use concerned."

He also pointed out that the maps are general in character and that on-site interpretation and investigation need to be made of each area. The RC&D technicians are available for consultation for this purpose. At the present time, 10 towns in Aroostook County, including Houlton, Island Falls and Bridgewater, are considering the building of the loading stations. "For this reason," Mr. Knight said, "careful consideration to locating these sites should be given by the towns involved, since it may eventually lead to the development of an industrial complex and thus affect future development."

Mr. Knight urges that all towns considering sugar beet loading facilities to get in touch with the St. John-Aroostook RC&D Project Office, Agricultural Center Building, Presque Isle, phone 769-2871, for assistance in either interpreting the present maps which the town now has, or to have a soil suitability map prepared for industrial development and heavy building sites.

Farmers Will Receive Report Of Payments

Farmers will benefit from a new reporting service which has been inaugurated by ASUS, Edward D. Hews, chairman of the Aroostook ASC County Committee announced today. A report of payments made to each farmer under ACP, Soil Bank, feed grain, wheat, sugar and other direct payment programs during 1967 will be mailed to the farmer during the latter part of January.

This report is expected to be helpful in preparing individual income tax returns. The same information must also be furnished to the Internal Revenue Service in accordance with a requirement of law.

It is estimated that over three million farmers will receive this report, he said. This information is being gathered from county offices and summarized by computers located at New Orleans and Kansas City. The reports are being printed by the computers and mailed direct to farmers. A job of this size could not be completed without an automated system, added Mr.

Peabody Completes Artillery Training

Private Thornton L. Peabody, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph O. Peabody of 5 Bowdoin street, Houlton, completed eight weeks of training as an artillery surveyor December 21 at the Army Artillery and Missile School, Ft. Sill, Okla.

Artillery surveyors precede firing units, map the area and gather information necessary to bring fire on a target.

During the course, he studied use of surveying equipment, map reading, communications procedures and computation of survey information.

Hews

Since this is the first year for a service of this magnitude, there are bound to be a few problems. He suggested that farmers carefully read the explanation on the report, and check the accuracy of the total reported by comparing it with farm records.

If an error is discovered, the nearest ASUS county office should be contacted to have the mistake corrected. County offices have been instructed to give farmers whatever assistance they need regardless of where the farm is located.

Jones And Malone End Recruit Training

Marine Private Alan W. Jones, son of Mrs. Laure Gove of 44 School St., Houlton, Maine, and Kenneth A. Malone, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stearns J. Malone of Rt. 1, Houlton, Maine, were graduated from eight weeks of recruit training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot here.

They will now undergo from two to four weeks of individual combat training and then, after leave at home, will report to his first Marine Corps assignment.

The intensified Marine recruit training emphasizes rigid physical conditioning and survival techniques, both at sea and ashore, to develop self-confidence and endurance. Marksmanship with the M-14 rifle and 45-caliber pistol are equally stressed, and close order drill instills the traditions of Marine Corps teamwork.

A thorough study of basic military subjects, hygiene, first aid and sanitation, and the customs, courtesies, history and mission of the Marine Corps serve to polish the new Marine's recruit education and prepare him to join the Marine combat forces.

These odds would sound rather way out even to a gambler. However this is just the size of the ante for the Town of Houlton when the polls will open for a special town election to be held this Thursday, January 4.

If 450 people as required by state law go to vote and if the majority favors the proposal to approve the sale of $300,000 in revenue bonds to finance the construction of a sugar beet receiving storage station in Houlton, all concerned stand to win.

The financial status of the Town is not infringed upon. The Town is not liable. The debt limit of Houlton is not affected.

The Town lends its tax free borrowing powers to Maine Sugar Industries. Non-taxable revenue bonds will be issued to finance the construction of the property. The property will become a taxable asset to the community.

It is very hard to be critical of such a proposal. In fact, it is very difficult to even find fault with the circumstances necessary to approve the proposal.

In the past few years there has been a rather poor reception to special town meetings and elections. This newspaper has endorsed that opinion. However, the exception in the case of an extreme emergency has been retained. This is the exception!

The construction of the proposed addition to the sugar beet industry is a move towards industrial development that will benefit the agricultural interests of this area. The growth of the sugar beet industry is important to all of us. It becomes more apparent that a diversified agricultural economy is needed. The proposed construction is necessary for the future growth of the beet industry. The beet industry is in operation. It is not an idle dream but a reality that a great many people have worked hard to establish.

We urge you to go to the polls and vote. An affirmative vote is a vote for the future of Houlton and the surrounding communities.

Republican Rhubarb

The Aroostook County Delegation has kept the recent trend of the Republican record intact. Or perhaps it should be said that the motivating influences behind the decision by the delegation that gave the appointment for nomination to the Governor's Council to Harold Stewart of Presque Isle again prevailed. As in the past primary election, the support of the candidates for office from Southern Aroostook was again passed over.

It seems rather unrewarding for the Republican supporters in Southern Aroostook to again be relegated to the background in return for their consistent support of Republican candidates throughout the County over the years.

It perhaps becomes even more hard to take when a delegate from the Southern part of the County fails to support their own.

The opinion of many Republican supporters in this area is that the decision of the delegation should have been clearly decided even before their recent meeting at Presque Isle. Decided, that is, in a manner other than what had apparently already been done.

The delegation was primarily the voice of the Republican party in Aroostook and many feel that it was time that the Southern Aroostook area should have been recognized. The old excuse of popular vote doesn't apply. This was an election by a Republican majority.

The candidate from Southern Aroostook was qualified. He had served in the legislature and in County government. His next political office should have been the appointment to the Governor's Council.

Two Biographies

Poles apart in background but sharing a common literary spotlight this season are Marcia Davenport and Eddie Rickenbacker. Both have written their autobiographies, and each will draw an appreciative, though dissimilar, following.

Marcia Davenport's "Too Strong For Fantasy" is "a personal record of music, literature, and politics in America and Europe over half a century."

The daughter of Alma Gluck, one of the famed voices of opera's Golden Age. Mrs. Davenport lived in a world studded with the "greats" of music. Toscanini, Caruso, Heifetz and Gershwin are some of the talents with whom she has associated. Her own reputation as a writer was established first with a biography of Mozart in 1932 and then later with such novels as "The Valley of Decision."

Her connection with politics in Europe came through a deep friendship with Jan Masaryk, Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia at the time of the Communist take-over. Mrs. Davenport writes about herself with reticence, but there is a wealth of material about others.

"Captain Eddie" has been in the public eye off and on for fifty years. His triumphs are many, primarily in the air, but before that in 1916 he was an avid racing-car driver. World War I came along and he flew with the legendary Flying Circus, earning nineteen decorations for bravery in action. Between World War I and World War II he owned and operated the Indianapolis Speedway. World War II put Captain Rickenbacker back in the air again on a series of official missions, and in 1942 he and his crew crashed into the sea. "Seven Came Through" tells of the twenty-four days and nights they spent in rubber rafts awaiting rescue.

After the war he served as chairman of the board of Eastern Airlines which he had purchased in 1938, retiring in 1963 at the age of seventy-three. A colorful man who has hobnobbed with many celebrities of this age, he tells his story with candor and modesty.

Cities And The Countryside

When the United States took its first census in 1790 only 1 out of 20 Americans lived in an urban area.

Today 14 out of every 20 Americans live in urban centers—cities and their suburbs.

In a recent column we talked about how the United States population will soar from the present 200 million to 300 million in the next 32 years. Now we will talk about some of the things people are talking about to overcome these problems.

Cities Too Overcrowded

The first thing that must be realized, of course, is that existing cities aren't in a position to take on too many more new people. They can barely handle the ones they have now.

When a New Yorker moves to the suburbs, for example, he not only takes his paycheck and goes off the city's tax rolls but he costs the city $21,000 in capital outlay to provide facilities so he can drive to and from work in the city every day.

"A city can get too big simply because the cost of providing services increases all out of proportion to total population growth," says Mayor Davis of Kansas City. "This becomes perfectly clear when put on a per capita basis, which is about $120 a year in Kansas City. In a city twice this size, per capita costs would rise to more than $200 a month."

Answer Is In The Countryside

Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman suggests several ways to meet the needs of a growing population for living space:

By revitalizing the villages, towns and cities of the countryside and build new towns and cities there.

By using the countryside with all of its assets—space, beauty, outdoor recreation, moderate land and building costs, power and underemployed people—as a site to expand industry and jobs.

By using the countryside as a location for new research centers, colleges and training schools.

"We can develop housing, community facilities, and jobs that will enable our towns, small cities and open countryside when joined in functional, multicounty communities of tomorrow areas to hold their young people and to provide living space for those Americans who would prefer to live, work, and play in, or close to, the great outdoors," Freeman says.

"Much has been done, and more will be done, to make our large central cities more livable—partly by utilizing the opportunities of the surrounding countryside."

Community Of Tomorrow

Here is Mr. Freeman's concept of the Community of Tomorrow would be like:

It would cover a much larger geographic area than today's community. It may extend over several counties. It will include a large or small city or two and a number of towns, villages, shopping centers, with open country in between.

Each of its components—villages, towns, cities and counties—will be bound together by roads, rivers, and other physical and resource features that enable it to be a dynamic and fully functioning economic, social and cultural unit.

Finally, it would offer a wide range of industrial jobs as well as a full range of employment in business, research, professional and trade services. Other jobs will be available in government, in the field of public recreation, and in the arts.

President Johnson has directed the Secretary of Agriculture to work with other Federal departments to help them make their programs and services as readily available to people in towns and country as they are to people in cities.

Already many federal and state programs are available to help plan and finance community development projects. But without dynamic local leadership these programs amount to nothing.

"People now are organized and at work in hundreds of towns and counties throughout the Nation. Many new and expanded communities have been formed and are moving ahead."

In some areas comprehensive planning is being carried out on a multicounty basis. New factories are springing up in the midst of cotton fields and cornfields.

There are plans underway to make greater use of our water and forest resources. Manpower training programs, community colleges, and vocational technical schools are appearing in rural areas.

The Department of Agriculture is financing the construction or improvement of 50,000 rural homes each year. Every year USDA helps more than 1,000 rural communities obtain modern water or waste disposal systems.

A vast network of superhighways is providing easy access to large sections of rural America.

"The whole face of America may be changed in the next generation. People fed up with living in dying old cities may flock in droves to the new cities of tomorrow."

The Editor's Corner

Caribou has joined the increasing list of cities to be found in the state. The move to a city form of government was prompted by the need of a more effective and workable method of operating what can be termed as big business.

Management of a community is fast growing to be a more demanding function than ever before in history. There are times when a decision must be made promptly in order to afford the community a chance at progressing.

We offer our best wishes to the new City of Caribou. It is also hoped that the citizens of Houlton will take notice of the progressive step taken by that community. Perhaps the proponents of a more effective form of town government for Houlton will become more active.

Look for a number of local business transfers in ownership and relocations in the very near future. The business district of Houlton will soon be offering some familiar faces in new locations. You may have to look twice before entering some of the older and familiar store fronts.

Main Street, U. S. A. Federal Facts, Figures

By Bert Mills

Washington, D. C. — Tax dollars are spent for many purposes, among them the collection of a vast array of facts and figures. Some are vital to government operations and some are simply interesting. Here are recent examples:

Contrary to popular belief, farmers generally are no older than other comparable groups of businessmen and workers. In fact, the more successful farmers — those with annual sales of $10,000 or more — tend to be somewhat younger than their counterparts in other occupations. And these farmers in the over $10,000 bracket account for more than 80 per cent of total farm output.

When the 56-year-old Postal Savings system was closed down last June, some 600,000 depositors failed to collect nearly $53 million. Five months later the Treasury Department still had almost $38 million waiting to be claimed. The Post Office Department has not sought missing depositors or their heirs.

A 1952 law requires aliens in the U.S. to report their addresses each January. Only exceptions are those with diplomatic status. Most aliens visit their local Post Office to file their report, and at least 3,675,000 reports are expected in January, 1968.

Catalog of the Government Printing Office includes 27,000 titles. Last year GPO sold 66.6 million publications, at an average price of 22 cents. Most sales are by mail, and more than one million people subscribe to lists of U.S. publications. Book stores making over-the-counter sales are operated in Washington and Chicago, and a new one is planned in Kansas City.

Auto Travel Up Sharply

Automobile travel in 1967 rose about four per cent and totaled around 967 billion vehicle miles. The average passenger car covered 9,506 miles in 1966, consuming 679 gallons of gas, at a rate of 14 miles per gallon. About half of annual travel is on city streets, which have only 14 per cent of total road mileage.

U.S. Mint has proclaimed an end to the coin shortage. Popularity of vending machines, plus inadequate productive capacity, caused the problem. A new mint in Philadelphia, to be in full operation in 1969, will produce one million coins per hour — eight billion per year.

Thirty-six out of every 100 persons released from jail are back in trouble with the law within a short time. But South Carolina has been able to cut the figure to eight per cent, through a vocational rehabilitation program which continues until the ex-convict is established in a job.

Jail Costs Are High

Incidentally, it costs about $2,500 in tax dollars to keep a man in jail for one year. And if he has a wife and one child and they go on welfare while he is incarcerated, the cost to taxpayers is another $2,000 per year.

Americans ate an average of more than 175 pounds of red meat in 1967 — an all-time consumption record. A 10 per cent rise in pork production helped swell the total. Beef output rose only two per cent but set a new record. Production of veal and lamb was down.

Census figures show that population density in Harlem is more than 122,000 people per square mile. If all 200 million Americans were jammed up like Harlem residents, the entire U.S. population could be squeezed into Long Island.

Per-student expenditures on public school library books almost doubled in a single year when 1967 funds became available for book-buying in 1966. Ninety per cent of the Federal money went for library books, only 10 per cent for textbooks and other instructional materials. Elementary schools got nearly two-thirds of the new money.

Efforts of the Federal government to reduce cigarette smoking have been a dismal flop. Cigarette production hit a new high in 1967 and per capita consumption rose slightly from 1966. A further increase in consumption is forecast in 1968 by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Epiphany

Saturday is Epiphany, first gentle recognition of Jesus by the Magi in Bethlehem ("house of bread" or "village in the grainfields"), a truly meaningful birthplace for the Bread of Life.

Imagine Jerusalem's excitement as a dust-laden caravan travelled its streets asking, "Where is He, born King of the Jews?" Picture the royal court's fearful scramble to appease senile Herod, struggling to seem calm before the strangers, awaiting their answer. Consider enraged Herod, learning the Magi had left another way.

God calls, never compels, man to seek him despite challenging obstacles. Practical folk condemn the journey as irrational, but live by borrowing his courage. Blocked by nature and popular opinion, we choose to go or stay; between meaningful or meaningless life.

Casper's gold represents wealth, surpassing life's life isn't rigorously dedicated to Christ. Melchior's frankness represents thought and influence. Is knowledge unmarked by fragrant reverence? Belshazzar's myth represents grief and suffering, the hardest gift for Christ, whose luxurious bitterness we prefer to keep.

Judah's government didn't "search diligently," because it's easier to ask others, viewing Scripture historically, than seek truth for daily living. But those who journey, rather than just direct others, will find their God and Savior.

Maine Economy Advances In 1967

The Maine economy continued to advance in 1967. Gains were registered in practically every category, according to data assembled by the Department of Economic Development.

Personal income, employment and income from sales taxable by the State were among the segments of the Maine economy which advanced in 1967. The number of insured unemployed at mid-October was substantially unchanged from a year ago and was comparable with the current national rate.

It appeared that the value of manufactured products would increase for the sixth consecutive year. This figure climbed above the $2-billion mark for the first time in 1966.

Tourism registered a gain over the previous year, and activity continued in the field of metals mining, with one company scheduling ore concentrate shipments of copper and zinc early next year.

An estimated 3,310 new jobs were projected with the addition of 1,202,560 square feet of manufacturing space by 23 new industries and 44 industrial expansions involving a diversity of products and located in several areas throughout the State. As of November 30 the number of new industries and expansions was 8 less than for the twelve months of 1966; projected employment trailed by 4,574, while the total manufacturing space added was less by 972,225 square feet.

The year saw noteworthy activity in the construction of shopping centers in many areas. One of the largest was announced by the W. D. Lane Co., of Boston, to be leased by Jordan Marsh Company. The center, to be located in South Portland, will contain an office building and some 50 retail stores. It was scheduled for completion in August 1969 at a cost of $20,000,000.

Personal Income and Employment

Personal income registered gains over 1966 for each of the first seven months (latest data available).

Personal income for July 1967 was $220,300,000, an increase of slightly more than 7 per cent over July 1966. Hourly earnings in manufacturing averaged $2.27, up $0.12. The average work week in manufacturing was 40.9 hours, down .5 hour from 1966.

As of mid-October, manufacturing employment totaled 118,900, an increase of 4,900 jobs over October 1966. Total nonfarm employment increased by 6,100, for a 2 per cent gain over October 1966. This represented an employment gain at the rate of approximately 1,000 jobs per month.

The insured unemployment rate as of mid-October was 1.8 per cent of the covered workforce, substantially unchanged from 1966 and on a par with the national rate at that time. The unemployment was distributed quite evenly throughout the economy, with no particular segment especially hard hit. Seventy percent of the covered unemployed were women.

Taxable Sales
Taxable sales including transient rentals registered gains for each of the first 8 months of 1967. The per cent of gain for the period January through August was 3.1. Great gains were registered in automotive 3.9; food and lodging 3.4 and general merchandise 3.2 per cent. Taxable sales for the period totaled $737,981,835.

Tourism
While some Maine and other New England communities attributed a decline in their 1967 summer tourist business to Montreal's Expo 67, the DED's Director of Vacation Travel Promotion saw Expo travel as a boon to Maine, statewide.

He estimated that a minimum of 3,150,000 vacationed in Maine this summer and that they spent $348,000,000, raising the State's take to "a conservative 5 per cent" above the 1966 figure.

This was because "unanticipated traffic to Expo '67" in not all, but many parts of Maine, made up for what might have been a rather disastrous year otherwise, due to the worst weather, spring and fall, experienced here in a decade and more.

Increases of more than $1.5 million in income were registered by such indicators as gas, cigarette, liquor and sales taxes and highway tolls during the check months of June, July and August. Many areas entertained tourists from more distant than usual parts of the United States and from foreign countries. This appeared to justify DED's special advertising and publicity program designed to induce Expo visitors to "take the Maine way home."

Mining
The prospect that metals mining would some day contribute significantly to the Maine economy continued to brighten in 1967. The State Geologist estimated that private industry spent $3.5 million in mineral exploration and mine development in Maine during the year, and that public agencies and institutions expended an additional $400,000 in this field.

The Maine Geological Survey continued its geological mapping program and began a major study into the sources of copper and zinc minerals in the coastal belt. Ten years of field work by some 96 geologists and students culminated in a "Preliminary Geologic Map of the State of Maine" this year, prepared under the supervision of the Director of the DED Geology Division. The map defines the target area for future mineral exploration as a strip varying from 20 to 50 miles in width from Bangley to Patten, and another about 20 miles wide between Castine and Calais.

Federal Government agencies were active in a search program for heavy metals sources, spending an estimated $150,000 for this purpose in Maine this year. A major diamond drilling operation in Union, where exploration for nickel ore has continued since 1956, was conducted with the aid of Department of the Interior and Economic Development Administration funds.

The Callahan Mining Corp. of New York opened a pit at Harborside in Brooksville and completed a copper and zinc concentrating mill of 500 ton per day capacity this year. Shipping of ore to smelters in either New Jersey or Canada was expected to begin in April, 1968.

The Blackhawk Mining Co. copper-lead-zinc mine at nearby Bluehill was put on a stand-by basis because of policy changes by its parent company, Denison Mines, Ltd. of Toronto. The company had completed a shaft with 10,000 feet of underground workings and surface buildings.

Noranda Mines, Ltd., one of the giants of the Canadian mining industry, continued its copper and molybdenum diamond drilling and evaluation program south of Jackman and a smaller company, Spooner Mines and Oil Ltd., conducted explorations in the same general area.

Several other companies conducted explorations of varying size in Eastern and North Western Maine. These included Vitro Corp., New Jersey Zinc Co., Superior Oil Co. and U. S. Smelting, Refining and Mining Co.

Oceanography
Some observers believe that oceanographic activity in the Gulf of Maine could increase greatly next year if a seismic survey along 2,000 miles of the Georges Banks during the summer and fall of 1967 shows positive results and can be coupled with a recent announcement of the discovery of natural gas at the Sable Island wildcat well of the Mobil Oil Co.

The Governor's Office and the Department of Economic Development have followed these developments closely. The DED is considering plans for an advertising campaign to direct the attention of the research and development sectors of the economy toward the Gulf of Maine.

Other developments in the field included announcement of a doctorate program in oceanography to be instituted by the University of Maine and increased activity at the University's Darling Center for marine studies at Walpole directed toward the establishment of a marine biology station there.

A proposal for the State to license the taking of sea moss from certain coastal areas was heard by a legislative research committee.

Development Finance
State government participation in private enterprise financing was augmented by referendum in which the voters approved constitutional amendments to increase bond issue authorizations and to widen the scope of activities in which the agencies may engage.

Proposals to enable the Maine Industrial Building Authority to add to its activities the guarantee of mortgage loans on agricultural machinery and equipment and on documented fishing vessels, and an increase of $7 million which brought the Maine Recreational Authority's authorization to issue bonds to $17 million, were among the constitutional amendments approved.

The Maine Industrial Building Authority celebrated its tenth anniversary in 1967. During the decade of operation it has issued mortgage guarantees on a total of 50 new or expanded Maine industrial plants costing more than $28 million. The plants, totalling almost 3 million square feet in added manufacturing space and providing some 4,000 new jobs, are located in 39 communities in 15 of the 16 Maine counties. The products manufactured are as diversified as the plant locations.

Eight of these plants have expanded their facilities since the original financing and in four cases three separate expansions have occurred.

Half the firms serviced by MIBA during the decade are from out of state, half were existing Maine companies. Dollarwise, Maine firms benefited substantially more.

Face amounts of the loans insured range from $15,000 to $6,000,000 with a median figure of $250,000. Four insured loans have been repaid, in the amount of $1 million, and installment payments on others total approximately $2.5 million.

The Authority has paid claims on five defaults during the period. In three of these cases new tenants were found for the properties and the Authority was reimbursed for its claims payments almost in entirety. In the other two cases the original tenants are meeting current rental payments and are expected to complete payments in arrears.

Calendar 1967 was a record year for MIBA, when ten mortgage loans were insured for an aggregate amount of $8,667,234, including a $6 million insured loan for construction of the Maine Sugar Industries Inc. sugar beet refinery at Easton. At the end of the year there were eight commitments to insure loans totalling $3 million, to be consummated when construction is completed in 1968.

At year's end the Maine Recreation Authority, which insures construction and equipment mortgage loans in the recreational field such as MIBA services industry, had insured a total of 13 mortgage loans for a total of $5.8 million. The transactions involved amounts ranging from $60,200 to $3 million, the latter being for a year-round resort under construction at Evergreen Valley in the towns of Stoneham and Lovell. Two projects, costing $243,000, were completed during 1967. The agency ended the year with a backlog of 17 applications for loan insurance, totalling $6 million.

Meanwhile, MIRFAB (Maine Industrial Recreational Finance Approval Board) continued to authorize the issuance of municipal revenue bonds to finance industrial and recreational projects. Thirteen projects involving $3.9 million had been approved and were in varying degrees of processing as of November 30, 1967. These included facilities for the production of shoes, a leather substitute, paperboard containers, tuna canning and the establishment of regional collection stations for sugar beet growers.

Wrong Way Signs To Dot Road

Errant motorists going against traffic on one-way roadways in Maine are to be reminded of their hazardous situation by a new warning sign reading, WRONG WAY IN WHITE letters on a red background.

The new signs are now being installed throughout the state in addition to the black and white warning sign, DONOT ENTER - already in effect.

The additional warning message, said Roger Mallar, the State Highway Commission's planning and traffic engineer, is part of the Commission's continuing effort to provide improved highway signing for the safety of the traveling public.

There has been no exceptional problem in Maine with wrong-way traffic movements, said Mr. Mallar. However, in the interests of safety, the new sign is being added as a supplemental message to the existing warning sign in situations where there is any possibility of wrong-way movements.

They will also be placed on highways where there is a transition from four lanes to two, and at locations where there is any possibility of motorists proceeding the wrong way into opposing lanes of traffic.

The supplemental warning signs are similar to those recommended for use by the Federal Highway Administration.
